Besides this personal interest, the dissert is almost local. Johnstown is only about 136 miles from Wheeling. Hundreds of people have been there, or know people who live there.

The scenes yesterday along the river were interesting. The night before many residents on low grounds on the Island or south of the creek were alarmed lest. Wheeling would herself suffer a flood, but yesterday this fear was allayed, and the prevailing feeling was one of sympathy for the sufferers. there got up to thirty feet, strong, late in the afternoon. Low lands were covered, but no harm resulted.

Shortly after daylight yesterday morning sight-seers began to flock to the river. The water was high, and it rose all day. At 5 a. m. the surface of the water was covered with drift so thick that one could almost walk across upon it. Pieces of houses, barns, fences, a few dead horses and cows, and one entire wooden house, painted green, went past.

Lots of men were out in skiffs and boats catching drift wood. There were numerous wild reports of the recovery of bodies here and in the vicinity, but only one of them could be traced to a reliable source. A plano was caught below the Belmont mill landing, and pieces of rafts, logs, boards and other timber were picked up. The Belle Prince caught a good sized raft of logs near the Island shore. At Martin's Ferry among the articles caught was a plano, an organ and a trunk by Clark's addition men.

The one exceptional report referred to above of the recovery of a body was one which came from West Wheeling to the effect that the corpse of a forty-year old man had been taken from the water on the Ohio shore. This seemed to come straight, but it was learned too late to confirm the statement satisfactorily.

Between 3 and 5 a. m. acres of debris passed, some twelve feet in height. In this were houses, barns, outbuildings, haystacks, trees, window shutters, sasti and frames, shingles, gates, bedsteads, cradles, chairs, tables and all kinds of furniture, in short nearly everything imaginable.

T. McClure, that was one of the best efforts of that able and popular divine. His text was taken from Joshus, third chapter and the last clause of the fourth verse—"Ye have not passed this way heretofore." The sermon or address was a very appropriate one, well fitting the text chosen. It was practical and full of everyday common sense ideas, that if followed out by those to whom the sermon was especially addressed, and by others as well, cannot fail to bring about happiness and content. The church was well filled, the congregation being a strikingly large one. The music was a feature of the services.

As usual Wheeling's liberal and warmhearted citizens have not been slow in taking measures to do their part in assisting to relieve the suffering and destitution that has been caused by the awful and unprecedented rush of waters out of the Conemaugh, in and around Johnstown. Alout $3,000 in cash has already been subscribed and the indications are that this sum will be at least doubled by additional subscriptions and donations of food and clothing. It has already been demonstrated that Wheeling's well deserved reputation for being ever ready to extend a helping hand in time of distress, will again be well sustained.

Saturday evening when the workman quit work on the tearing down of the Capitol rink, a section of the skeleton sides and roof about one-third the length of the rink was left standing. It was feared it was not safe, and the sidewalk in front on Market street was barricaded and the frame anchored with a rope. About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, just after a dozen or so of small boys had sleft the place, the dismantled frame fell to the ground with a crash, attracting a big erowd but doing no harm, except spoiling some good lumber. gined.

Two miles from the town is the "SX." tower of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and here it is that the greatest railroad in the world ends suddenly in the river. For more then a thousand feet the entire track is wiped out, rails, ties, and even ballast. The north track is entirely washed away.

This is the nearest telegraphic point to Johnstown on this side, and the delay in getting off news dispatches has been fairly maddening.

At the German Methodist church on the South Side children's day services were observed last evening. The auditorium of the church was crowded with the children and their friends. A patiform was erected across the front of the church and was tastefally decorated with evergreens and potted plants. Erected upon the platform was a large arch with open gates, handsomely tringmed with laurel, while to the right and left of the platform were tables filled with bouquets. A well arranged programme was gone through with, members of the school taking part in recitations and congr. A beautiful concert recitation entitled "Star. Cross and Crown," was given by nine young ladies dressed in white, each presenting in turn a motto, which was placed in position on the arch. Mr. Ernest Metzner, the Superintendent of the school, had charge of the service.
